When the Center for International Programs and Linkages (CIPL) was set up in 1995, one of its main responsibilities was to facilitate and enhance the global visibility and profile of the University of Nairobi.

Led by Prof. William Oigara, CIPL has successfully managed to attract hundreds of foreign students across the world to pursue studies at the University of Nairobi.

“We are committed to providing an international environment within the university by enrolling an increasing number of international students and inviting international scholars who help co-create partnerships and collaborations without borders.” Says Prof. Oigara.

Currently, there are over 500 international students pursuing various programs at the University of Nairobi either on full time basis or on student exchange programs.

Good global rankings and high quality academic programs have made the University of Nairobi a popular choice for many international students. The Prestigious Times Higher Education (THE) Ranked the University of Nairobi among world’s top 250 in 2018. According to Webometrics ranking of world universities, the University of Nairobi is ranked top 10 in Africa and the best in East and Central Africa.

Agathon Angembe a Diploma in Public Relations student from the Democratic Republic of Congo says, “As a young African, I am glad because the University of Nairobi is shaping me to be a problem solver and a leader in the society.”
